"Learning Dutch is fun & using Dutch in practice enriches your local life."

Many internationals never get round to taking Dutch lessons and the ones who do often struggle to use Dutch in real life. Now there is a new, innovative method: Boost Your Dutch.

Boost Your Dutch is specially developed to help internationals overcome the hurdles of getting to grips with the Dutch language.

The Boost Your Dutch approach takes advantage of the extensive skill set & life experiences of internationals:

- Explain essential basic principles of the Dutch language and show how they fit together (the bigger picture).
- Provide meaningful insights instead of just learning lots of rules.
- Take advantage of similarities in English as much as possible.
- Appreciate that participants are well-educated, professional internationals with valuable experiences and skill sets.

The Expat Wellbeing Indicator

Professional measuring tool: "Ask the non-locals"

"EWI is the first professional measuring tool to determine local attractiveness for internationals."

Internationals generally expect the Netherlands to be easy to settle into. They are surprised to learn that it can be difficult and time-consuming to find your way locally.

Fortunately, many Municipalities have taken steps to improve their communication with and procedures for internationals. In the bigger cities, Expat Centers have also opened their doors to welcome new international residents, but what are the results of all these efforts?

The Expat Wellbeing Indicator (EWI) provides valuable insights in the strengths and weaknesses of local services used by internationals. It also produces the Net Promotor Score (NPS) and gives recommendations to improve local competitiveness.
